SCRAPS.

It is known that coffee grounds form a very fertilizing material for soils. The consumption of coffee here amounts to nearly 18,000 tons annually. The grounds are usually thrown down the sink, washed away, and lost. If care was taken to throw them into the dusthole, an immense quantity of a substance, as rich in nitrogen as guano, would be restored to the earth. This material would be invaluable to market gardeners and florists, and should receive their most prompt consideration. The poor might enjoy the most important advantages of the rich, had they the moral and religious cultivation consistent with their lot. They have a book that contains more

"Homo," in a late letter says: -"I have employed the word "stirring." Matthew St. Clair Clarke, for many years clerk of the House of Representatives, was an inimitable wit as well as an invaluable officer. and an honorable, high souled gentlemen .-Among the innumerable stories with which he was in the habit of entertaining his friends, I recollect the following:

Six men were travelling on horseback in a 'sparsely" settled country. They hoped to reach a Tavern, distant about twenty miles where they would spend the night. But after starting, the weather became very tempestuous and the rain fell in torrents. They resolved, with entire unanimity, to stop at the first house and take shelter for the night. Soon reaching an humble log cottage they alighted, and were kindly and hospitably received. The good woman of the DR. WILLIAM B. MOFFAT, house and her "liege lord" soon prepared a supper for their guests. The coffee though made of rye was passably good, but there was but one spoon with which to stir it .-The spoon was used by number one, who handed it to number two, who in turn hand-S NOW receiving his fall supplies of GUANOS ed it to his neighbor, and finally coffee was stirred by six different persons with the same spoon. When the sixth man was through with the operation he laid the spoon down and to the surprise of everybody present, it, (the spoon) was heard audibly to remark, these are stirring times.

ANCIENT REMEDIES .- The most laughable of all Bulleyn's receipts is one in which, or the cure of a child's suffering under a certain nervous malady, he prescribes a "small young mouse roasted." To some a "roasted mouse" may seem more palatable than the compound in which snails are the principal ingredient. "Snayles," says Bulleyn, "bro-All of which are warranted to be of the best ken from the shelles sodden in whyte wyne with oyle and suger are very holdsome, because they be hoat and moist for the straightness of the lungs and cold cough. Snayles stamped with camphory, and leven will draw north prycks in the flesh." So long they can be found in this city. I name in part | did this belief in the virtue of snails retain the following articles: Trimmings and Buttons its hold on Suffolk, that the writer of these pages remembers a venerable lady (whose memory is cherished for her unostentatious benevolence and rare worth) who for years Leather, Silk and Gold Belts; Jett and Gilt daily took a cup of snail broth, for the benefit Clasps; Gold and Wax Beads; Spangles, Hair, of a weak chest. - Jefferson's Book about
